Phosphorylation of the 5'-terminal nucleotide of ribosomal RNA by the 2-component, ATP-dependent 5' adenylation-addition system of Escherichia coli ribosome. A system for phosphorylating 5'-terminal nucleotides of ribosomal RNA (rRNA) has been reconstituted in vitro. The system is a 2-component, ATP-dependent 5' adenylation-addition system which is functionally similar to the previously described 5'-adenylation-addition system. The 5' phosphorylation of the rRNA is not dependent on the ribosome but is carried out by a 5'-adenylation-addition complex composed of ATP-dependent RNA ligase (EC 2.7.7.27 82157476af
